Poor "Clara Belle," like "Hugh Conway," continues work after death Neither of them does as well as when with the minority.—Chicago Pribune.

A German savant who had long been suffering from the everlasting pianoforte playing next door, has devised the following method of putting a stop to it at pleasure. An electric latery was connected with a powerful entro-magnet. Whenever a current of electricity was turned on its effect could easily be felt through the wall by the horizontal steel strings in the piano, which was instabled in the fair recently held at Senator Logan's house in Washington for the benefit of the Garfield Hospital it is related Mr. Logan devoted his attention for some time to a very bright and pretty girl who kept the cigar and cigarette booth. As he stood at the side of the booth looking for all the world like a wooden Indian of the old-fashionned steel strings in the piano, which was intobacco-shop several other Senators came up, and one of them said: "Why does Logan linger here so long?" ---Clara Morris' Career. Twenty-four years ago, on the ground where the Cleveland theater—the newest of the local houses-now stands, there was a small and modest cottage, cover-ing the heads of the humble Widow Morrison and her 13-year-old daughter Clara, writes a Cleveland correspondent of the Boston Globe. That daughter has shortened her name and become famous as Clara Morris. The widow had a boarder named Blanche Bradshaw, a ballet girl in John Ellsler's Academy of gaged as a fairy for the spectacle, 'The Seven Sisters," in the face of her mother's opposition. Her salary was $1.50 a week. As a supe she worked for three years. Then a fluke gave her a speaking part. Clara Morris soon
